“ Alan was a great friend of mine for over 65 years. During the past 4 or 5 years, I would call him once a week and we would chat for a time, mostly about nonsense. I usually would challenge him to come up with a new idea by 'next week' for making us both rich. His ideas ranged from "capturing" an iceberg and then floating it up the Blue River, to teaching penguins to fly, to organizing a dancing bears troupe, to moving a pyramid to Hebron and charging admission to go through it. All total nonsense, but enjoyable. On the more serious side, I pointed out to him that many, many farmers in the Bruning area were successful in large part to his willingness to work 7 days a week, 12-15 hours per day during the entire irrigation season. His effort and dedication to deliver Skelgas kept all of the pumps running 24/7 and the corn growing!
Al, you will be missed. Jim Bruning
