Rose helped in the home until she went to Lincoln and worked for John Cristakus in his Café. Rose's father came to visit her there and he got a t-bone steak for $2.50. In 1944, Rose started working for the Elgin Watch Company. She worked there until the company closed down and moved out of state. They had a son, Robert William, born on July 25, 1947, and he passed away on November 3, 1947. Rose's husband, Art, passed away on April 6, 1974. Rose was a very hard worker and even at the age of 90, was mowing her own yard and taking care of her home. She had a hard time accepting the fact that she should slow down and rest. Rose had a love of animals, especially cats. She has five buried under her apricot tree and Pete and Little One were her current companions.
